Online Classroom expectations

Expectations for Students for Virtual Learning

Our class together online is a sacred place of learning about the ancient secrets of energy in a space, and being a sacred space for your classmates, in training for your future clients. While we will not be together in a physical space, the space you set up for your class time and your learning is important.

Online Zoom Class time is a required attendance, requiring your attention and focus. To attend, we request your camera be on and you be present and attentive as if you were sitting with the class in a sacred circle of learning. This means not moving around your home, watching kids, doing other activities online, etc. Out of respect for what you are learning and other students, this also means not attending class in pajamas, or having other family members or people present in your space during class time. This might mean going someplace outside your home if it's not possible to be secluded during class time. If you choose to attend class in a place that is not your home, please take care to set up the space with the same sacred intention and privacy for all.

If for some reason you need to miss a class, then a special one-on-one session time will be set up with a trainer to review the topics missing. This session will be an additional $150 per hour and must be completed before your graduation can be completed and should be completed before the next Online Zoom class.

For the best results, we recommend that you dedicate a space for the purpose of this coursework where you will not be interrupted. You might wish to place an intention altar in this space dedicated to your learning and your graduation as a Soul Coaching® Practitioner. You might use candles, incense, essential oils, power objects, crystals, or other sacred objects to make this space powerful.

Show respect for your teacher and your fellow students by being on time, dressing appropriately, and staying present during our sessions. Allow for all voices to be heard in our sessions - All will have a chance to share and ask questions.
